THE POINT OF VIEW

Where grown womanhood becomes music.

A woman can know her worth and still want to be held. She can recognize a change in a familiar voice, need rest after carrying everyone else, and find romance in the life between grand gestures.

Mara Lennox is the contemporary R&B and soul project created by lyricist and producer Lynn Graham. Across seven songs, VELVET PRAYER: THE GROWN ERA makes room for desire, discernment, tenderness, Black love, and self-possession.

The writing moves from the attraction of the title track to the boundary in "Handle Me Soft," the vulnerability of "Crown Sit Crooked," and the ordinary devotion of "Groceries & Grace." "Carry Gold" recognizes Black men as worthy of tenderness as well as respect.

Graham wrote the lyrics and directed the concept and production, using Suno-generated music and vocals. Mara Lennox is the artist identity; the singing is not Graham's own voice.

THE SEVEN CHAPTERS

A full emotional life.

Desire. Discernment. Tenderness. Black love. Becoming.

Velvet Prayer

Desire with discernment. Sensual attraction meets the judgment of a woman who has learned to look beyond charm.

Handle Me Soft

Tenderness as a standard. The narrator protects her peace and makes gentleness a condition of closeness.

I See You Different

A shift in familiar intimacy. Female-lead and male-response lyrics trace the distance between staying present and feeling the same.

Crown Sit Crooked

Care beyond composure. A strong woman asks to be loved when fatigue shows and the polished face falls away.

Carry Gold

Black men, fully seen. Dignity and history sit beside vulnerability, rest, and the right to be held with care.

Groceries & Grace

Romance in the ordinary. A shared cart, familiar habits, and everyday consideration become the language of commitment.

Looks Real on Me

At home in yourself. The closing perspective turns toward self-acceptance and peace without performance.

FOR EDITORS, PROGRAMMERS & HOSTS

The stories worth a closer listen.

Grown womanhood, without a single script

The same project can hold attraction, clear boundaries, fatigue, humor, and affection. Start with "Velvet Prayer," "Handle Me Soft," and "Crown Sit Crooked."

Black love in the everyday

"Carry Gold" recognizes Black men beyond endurance. "Groceries & Grace" finds romance in the small acts that make a shared life feel known.
